you start your trip. Dece you arrive.

Don't think small.

"My driver's license says I'm 40. There must be some mistake." A couple things happen to us humans as we get on a little in years. A: Shock. B: We put our life in a bizarre holding pattern and leave the business of really living to the young. This is an outrage. Sure, you've got the job, spouse and bambino thing happening, but what if you're not up to driving around in some cookie-cutter family sedan designed to appeal to the least common denominator? Conveniently enough, we think we have at least part of the answer: Get a new Passat and live large.

Introducing the New Passat. Living large (i.e., squeezing every drop out of life), as it applies to cars anyhow, requires driving a vehicle with a certain presence. A certain heft, if you will. Enter the new Passat. It's beautiful without being precious, it's aot room for five adults and a trunk the size of a New York City apartment. Plus, it's got a rock-solid road stance that strikes fear into cars twice its price.

"My, what a big soul you have." Sure, the new Passat is safe and reliable and practical. It is, after all, a German car. But like all Volkswagens, the Passat is really about driving. It asks you to take an active role in the driving experience. It asks you to be involved. Downshifting hard into a tight corner is wholeheartedly encouraged. In short, the Passat asks you to stay in the game of life and enjoy the hell out of it. Granted, this may not be everyone's cup of tea, but then again, not everyone was meant to live large.
